VICTOR CRABBE

Prominent Hyndman Business Man Passes Away.

Victor Crabbe, only son of Albin G. and Laura V. Crabbe, departed this life at the residence of his parents in Hyndman Friday morning, March 3, after an illness of six weeks from typhoid fever, aged 22 years, 10 months and 21 days.

The subject of this sketch was born at Vanderbilt, Fayette County, on April 13, 1888, but shortly afterwards his parents moved to Hyndman where he has since resided, with the exception of a brief period spent in Albuquerque, N. M.

When a mere child he began to study music, confining his efforts to the clarinet, on which instrument he became expert. He frequently appeared in concerts in his home town and elsewhere, and for a number of years was a member of the Hyndman Concert Band, the Hyndman M. E. Church Orchestra and the Cumberland Concert Band.

Mr. Crabbe received his education in the Hyndman public schools, after which he successfully followed the plumbing business until his departure for Albuquerque where his numerous engagements as a clarinetist earned for him a substantial living. Returning home, he engaged in the mercantile business with his father under the firm name of Crabbe & Co., and by his genial and courteous manner, rigid honesty and strict attention to his work was rewarded with a large patronage which quickly placed his store on a profitable basis.

The sterling integrity of this young man together with his splendid musical and business talents, as well as many other excellent traits, won for him a wide circle of friends and acquaintances who mingle their tears with those of his bereaved parents and relatives in mourning his untimely departure.

Funeral services were held at the family residence Monday afternoon in the presence of one of the largest concourses of people that ever assembled on a similar occasion in this community. Rev. J. A. Foard, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, officiated, assisted by Rev. J. H. Wise of the United Evangelical Church. At the conclusion of the services, a procession was formed by the Hyndman Concert Band and members of Hyndman Lodge, No. 589, F. and A. M., of which the deceased was an honored member, and the immense cortege to the strains of solemn music slowly wended its way to the local cemetery, the members of the Masonic fraternity carrying the 26 magnificent floral offerings to the grave, accompanied by the bereaved relatives and sad friends. The scene was one that will not soon be forgotten.

The religious ceremonies at the grave were followed by the Masonic rites. As a fitting tribute of respect all business places in the town were closed while the funeral was in progress.

Deceased is survived by his parents and one sister, Mrs. Ida Hitchcock. His mortal remains were gently deposited in their earthly sepulchre, but his memory is enshrined with supreme sacredness in the hearts of those who knew and loved him.

Charles R. Rhodes, Hyndman, Pa., March 6, 1911.

SPECIAL SESSION

By Proclamation President Taft Calls the

SIXTY-SECOND CONGRESS

Into Extraordinary Session on April 4—Canadian Reciprocity Will Be Considered.

The Sixty-First Congress of the United States ended its labors on March 4, and, having failed to pass the McCall bill which would have given life to the agreement on reciprocal trade relations entered into by President Taft and the Canadian Government, the President, on the same day issued his proclamation convening the Sixty-Second Congress in extraordinary session and fixing April 4 as the date.

The President's Proclamation

Whereas, by the special message dated January 26, 1911, there was transmitted to the Senate and House of Representatives an agreement between the Department of State and the Canadian Government in regard to reciprocal tariff legislation, together with an earnest recommendation that the necessary legislation be promptly adopted; and

Whereas, a bill to carry into effect said agreement has passed the House of Representatives, but has failed to reach a vote in the Senate; and

Whereas, the agreement stipulates not only that "the President of the United States will communicate to Congress the conclusions now reached and recommend the adoption of such legislation as may be necessary on the part of the United States to give effect to the proposed arrangement" but also that "the governments of the two countries will use their utmost endeavors to bring about such changes by concurrent legislation at Washington and at Ottawa;" now,

Therefore, I, William Howard Taft, President of the United States of America, by virtue of the power vested in me by the Constitution, do hereby proclaim and declare that an extraordinary occasion requires the convening of both Houses of the Congress of the United States at their respective chambers in the City of Washington on the 4th of April, 1911, at 12 o'clock noon, to the end that they may consider and determine whether the Congress shall by the necessary legislation make operative the agreement.

All persons entitled to act as members of the Sixty-Second Congress are required to take notice of this proclamation.

Given under my hand and the seal of the United States at Washington, the 4th day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eleven and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and thirty-fifth. (Signed)

WILLIAM H. TAFT

By the President.

Secretary of State.

John S. Eneyart

John Shirley Eneyart, one of Saxton's prominent business men, died Monday afternoon after an illness of a couple years, of Bright's disease, aged 58 years, two months and five days.

In 1877 he was united in marriage with Miss Mary Stoler, who, with the following children, survives: Miss H. R. Nelson of Elizabeth, N. J., J. Stanley of Pittsfield, Mass., and Mrs. Hugh Smith of Letonia, O. Three brothers also survive: W. S. and J. Frank, of Saxton, and C. G. of Akron, O.

In his early days Mr. Eneyart was a Justice of the Peace in Puttstown. On coming to Saxton he worked in the store of S. B. and D. M. Stoler. He was active in many directions and filled a number of borough offices. He was a faithful member of the Reformed Church and was an officer in the Sunday School for a number of years.

Concerning Mr. Eneyart the Saxton Herald says: "In his business, civic and social life he was ever a congenial man, and in all things he was faithful to his trust. The quality of courtesy was foremost with him, and in his family life he was an ideal husband, father and companion. His passing makes for sadness in many hearts that will cherish his memory long years to come."

The funeral services were held on Wednesday and were conducted by Rev. M. A. Kieffer, pastor of the Reformed Church of Everett. Interment was made in the Fockler Cemetery.

LOCAL ARTIST SUCCEEDING

A. C. Davis Made Member of Associated Artists of Pittsburgh.

A. C. Davis, whose work with the pencil and the brush has for a number of years attracted attention locally, is being recognized and this work admired in wider circles, as is evident from the fact that he was recently elected by unanimous vote to membership in the Associated Artists of Pittsburgh.

A. C. DAVIS

Mr. Davis was born and raised in New Paris and while in the schools of that town revealed those traits that are characteristic of a born artist by reproducing whatever copy might be set before him accurately, defects included, and producing pencil work out of the ordinary. The tendency to draw followed him up to the time of his coming to Bedford, a number of years ago, and still remains.

Some 15 years ago he took a course in the Industrial Art School of Philadelphia. About 10 years ago he took up painting and his progress has been almost phenomenal. He has spent much time in recent years during the late summer and fall with A. Bryan Wall, the famous "sheep painter" of Pittsburgh, devoting most of his energies to painting landscapes and cattle.

Among the pictures that have attracted most attention are "Separation of Old Friends," "Feeding the Sheep," "An Autumn Day" and "Ending of Autumn."

In addition to work in the immediate vicinity of Bedford he has placed upon canvas many scenes along Dunning's and Bobb's Creeks.

He has done work on Judge, Life and Truth, and his paintings have been hung in art exhibits in Pittsburgh and other cities.

A few years ago he made a trip to Europe which extended over three months, during which he visited many famous cities and galleries, studying architecture and art. On this trip he visited Alexandria, Cairo, Athens, Rome, Jerusalem, London, Paris and other cities.

He well merits the recognition that has come to him from the Associated Artists of Pittsburgh.

CLOVER SEEDING

The Value of Cultivating and Inoculation.

Experiments with certain practices in seeding clover have brought results in Bedford County that are important.

Harrowing: In a number of cases part of the clover was harrowed in and part left unharrowed for comparison. In every case the harrowed clover made a much better stand and the wheat was benefitted or not injured. The better stand of clover and its importance in the rotation make this work profitable.

A section harrow is a little better for the work than a smoothing harrow, though the latter can be used very well. The harrow, with teeth set straight, is run with the drill lines, to loosen the earth. Clover is then seeded and the field cross harrowed, with the teeth slanted back in case of the section harrow.

Where the field is too hilly to cross harrow, the seeding is done before harrowing, and then the harrow run with the drill lines. To make a good stand and normal growth the seed should be covered with loose earth. There is almost always a time in the spring when the ground will stand the horses.

Inoculation: Work with inoculation in Bedford County has been going on for four years. Pure cultures are furnished without cost by the Department. The value of inoculation is as follows:

1. A more vigorous growth of the plant, giving more hay, greater depth of root penetration and more humus.
2. The bacteria draw their nitrogen from the air and leave the ground better supplied with nitrogen than before seeding. Uninoculated clover draws its nitrogen from the soil, leaving it poorer in nitrogen.
3. The deeper roots of the inoculated plants draw on the subsoil reserves of potash and phosphoric acid, making them available for later crops through the humus from the clover roots.
4. Inoculated clover will stand much greater extremes of drought and frost than uninoculated.
5. Nitrogen makes protein. Where there is an abundant supply of nitrogen any plant, within certain limits, can turn more of it into protein. That is, the same plant when underfed with nitrogen is lower in protein than where it has been given an abundant supply. It is highly probable, therefore, that the hay from inoculated clover is richer in protein than hay from uninoculated clover in the same field. A short supply of nitrogen is a limiting factor in the growth of any plant; and the more of it we can get into the ground the better for those crops which cannot draw nitrogen from the air.
6. Most of us are using phosphoric acid and potash in the shape of commercial fertilizer. If we can get nitrogen into the ground from the air through the use of the bacteria we have a means of balancing our commercial fertilizer, to a very considerable extent, to the needs of the various crops.

Inoculating material for clover, alfalfa, cowpeas, soy beans, etc., can be had, if you will let me know two weeks ahead, when you expect to seed. The method of using is simple and easy.

Very truly yours,

A. B. Ross, Special Agent,
Schellsburg, Pa.

Memory Resents Distrust

In "Some Letters and Their Writers," by Ellen Terry, in the March McClure's, Miss Terry tells of an excellent piece of advice given her by the Bishop of Ripon:

"I remember telling the Bishop of Ripon that I envied him his splendid memory. 'I seem to remember a thing quite well,' I told him; 'then I get frightened.'"

"The Bishop said: 'That's the worst thing you can do. Memory is a very delicate organ, and resents distrust.'"

"I am afraid I must often have provoked my memory to resentment! 'When I was young and in a pet, I prayed, 'Lord, teach me to forget.' Now I am old and in December, I pray, 'Lord, teach me to remember.'"

Love and a Laundry Check

The Way Two Lovers Became Reunited.

By MABEL D. CALHOUN.
Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"Well—I'll-be-jiggered!"

Chris Webb brought his horse to a standstill and stared down at the small square of yellow paper that fluttered before Dixie's dancing hoofs like a will-o'-the-wisp of the daytime. Suddenly he dug his knees into Dixie's shoulders, and as she sprang forward Chris leaned over and caught the flying paper with a practiced hand. Then he scanned it closely and uttered a long drawn whistle.

Plainly it was a Chinese laundry check and represented to its owner a necessary article of wearing apparel that probably lay unclaimed in the wash house of some moon faced Celestial.

A laundry check found on the sidewalk in town is a common occurrence. A laundry check discovered in an obscure canyon in the desert regions of Arizona becomes a matter for considerable interest, especially if one has just convinced himself that this particular canyon has never been trod by the foot of civilized man.

"There isn't a Chink laundry within fifty miles, or I'm a sinner! And I was sure I'd struck a new trail, and after naming that gully and all to find this!"

Hours afterward when he rolled dustily up to the bunk house and turned Dixie over to the friendly proffered services of Dutchy Fink there was some comment on his extended absence.

"Where's the critter?" asked Henderson, making room for his comrade at the table and passing Webb's cup to be filled.

"Dead," replied Christopher, his strong white teeth biting deep into a hunk of corn bread. "I followed the trail clean off the range into the sand and cactus and then I missed it. After awhile I saw a buzzard high in the air, and I guessed what had happened, so I followed and found the critter under a twisted cottonwood."

"Dead?" questioned Peters. "Almost. Of course I couldn't leave her that way with that devilish buzzard hanging around, so—he paused for another draft of coffee.

"So you shot her, Chris?"

"Yep, and then I shot the buzzard." They laughed indulgently. "You always was soft hearted, Chris," commented Peters, filling his pipe. "Who'd stop to bore a strayed critter after chasing her twenty miles?"

"I would," said Chris in a voice that indicated he was weary of the topic. "Any you chaps got baccy?"

He deftly rolled a cigarette in his lean brown fingers and drew a light from Henderson's smoke. "Which one of you fellows is wearing billed shirts?" he asked lazily.

"No guiltily!" they cried in chorus, and Peters continued, "They ain't a chap had nerve enough to sport a billed shirt on the Three Forks outfit—not since Pinsky Fleming was took for a ghost and a greaser shot him dead—right through the billed shirt!"

"Since then billed shirts has been looked on like sudden death," put in Henderson gravely. "No, sir, there ain't nobody on Little Forks wearing billed shirts. Why you ask, Chris?"

"Anybody know where there's a Chink laundry?" demanded Chris patiently.

"I expect there's one in Tucson," suggested Peters. "Seems like a dream—I remember shooting up a Chink laundry there. That was a long time ago," he added hastily.

"Then there ain't a Chink laundry nearer than Tucson?" said Chris.

"How about Cactus Branch?" suggested Redwood from his quiet corner. "Seems I recollect once when I was passing the Lone Horn—I was going to the roundup at the Branch, you know—some of the women folks asked me would I leave a bundle at the laundry there and get a check for it. Being of an obliging nature, I just naturally said I would, and I'm blamed if they didn't tote out a big, squashy bundle, and me expecting a couple of collars or maybe a billed shirt!"

"Traymore—you know Jim Traymore—running the Lone Horn now—Mrs. Traymore says not to lose it, because it's a 'precious thing.' It's nothing but a fancy white dress her sister was expecting to wear to the schoolhouse dance, and the girl had set her heart it should be done up right and nobody but a Chink must do it."

"As I was roped in for the job I bows most polite and says I will leave the check on my way back. —" he paused and eyed his companions dubiously—"you all recollect the roundup at Cactus Branch?"

"Being as it only happened last week, we have strong recollections," confessed Chris, rubbing his head thoughtfully. "We specially recollect all about you, Redwood, and you sure didn't take the trail by the Lone Horn when you came back, and you ain't been off this outfit since."

"That's right," admitted Redwood gloomily.

"What happened?"

"I left the squashy bundle all right, and the Chink said it would be 4 bits, and he gave me a piece of paper covered with turkey tracks, and now I don't know where the blamed paper is unless—"

He brightened suddenly and

"Now I reckon, what I want a cigarette out of it. I was never so near about that time."

Henderson laughed heartily. "You a little know it if you'd smoked that Redwood. Maybe he can help you out, because if that girl don't git to the dance, why, I don't know what us chaps will do. I've seen her."

"Is it that bad?" asked Peters sympathetically.

"She's a peacherino!" quoth Mr. Henderson warmly.

Chris got upon his feet and tossed away the end of his cigarette. "What trail did you follow when you came back from the roundup?" he yawned carelessly.

Redwood shook his head hopelessly. "I've been trying to figure that out ever since. I must have got lost, for I was three days getting back here, and I had nothing to eat!"

"You can cut that out!" interjected Peters, grinning. "I found you at Bederman's, and that's over to the south-east—somewhere near where Chris has been after his stray critter."

Mr. Webb's air of languor increased. "Then I reckon this young lady can't go to the dance unless she gets this dress what the Chink is washing, eh?" He yawned again.

Redwood nodded. "I reckon it's the only party dress she's got; she seemed mighty particular about it," he said regretfully.

"And she can't get the dress without the check?" persisted Chris sleepily.

"No checkee, no shirtee!" returned Redwood.

"You going to the dance?"

Mr. Redwood smiled laboriously and ran his hand along one leg with a painful gesture. "I reckon my leg's most too stiff this time, so I guess I won't be around tomorrow night," he said.

They laughed heartlessly as they parted for the night.

In his own corner of the roughly partitioned bunk house Christopher Webb pulled the laundry check from his pocket and studied the strange hieroglyphics with thoughtful eyes. "I'll do it," he said suddenly. "I reckon she'll be mighty grateful to the one who brings back her party dress. I expect it's a pretty thing—all frills and furbelows and lacy stuff, like what Annie used to wear." His dark eyes became almost black with a sudden intensity of emotion, and his brows knitted painfully. "I wasn't cut out for a book-keeper or for city life. If she'd only have seen that my coming into the open was my call to what I could do best, but she gave me the go by, and here I am! I'm a darned sight better off in some ways than I was there in Denver. I've got health and I've got a thousand salted away against the ranch I'll buy some day, but I haven't got her!"

His head drooped a little, and then, as if aware of his weakness, he threw back his shoulders and laughed softly. "No need to keep that other girl away from the party," he said in a low tone as he proceeded to make an elaborate toilet with such facilities as the ranch afforded.

It was past midnight when he let himself out of the door and made his way into the corral. It was the work of a moment to catch up a mount. This time it was a rawboned sorrel with a long raking stride that carried his rider over the trail with remarkable swiftness. At 10 o'clock the next morning Christopher Webb dismounted stiffly from the sorrel and entered the door of a Chinese laundry in the flourishing town of Cactus Branch. In his hand he carried a laundry check, and when he came forth he bore a large and squashy looking bundle, which he placed carefully before him when he remounted.

A brief stop for breakfast and then he was back on another trail, this time the one leading toward the Lone Horn. He knew Jim Traymore slightly, had met him three years before when Chris had first come out into the open, as he called his departure from the city, but he had not seen Jim recently. He had heard that he was married now and taken the Lone Horn.

At 5 o'clock he clattered up to the veranda of the Lone Horn ranch house and shouted in a stentorian voice:

"Laundry!"

There was a delighted shriek from within and light footsteps on the wooden floor of the hall. Then a slender form gowned in pale blue cotton darted across the veranda and held up eager arms for the bundle—a lovely golden haired girl with wistful blue eyes and a sadly drooping mouth, who did not see Christopher Webb's amazed face. She saw nothing save the bundle and a tall, kindly disposed cowboy who had ridden out of his way to oblige her.

"How can I thank you?" she was beginning when Christopher spoke from the shadow of his broad hat.

"Annie!" he said in a low tone.

Annie Lee looked at him for a moment, and then, dropping her head against his knee, she cried softly for awhile. "Elsie married Jim Traymore a year ago," she explained, "and I came out here to visit them. I didn't know where you were, Chris, but I felt somehow if I was out in this country I might be near you anyway. I—have wanted you so!"

When Christopher broke the news to his comrades at the Three Forks he added, laughing, "I reckon that there occasion will demand a billed shirt, eh, boys?"

"So do, so do," urged Henderson eagerly. "Seems like a wedding oughter break that there billed shirt hoodoo."

"You got any laundry checks up your sleeve?" demanded Peters of Henderson. "You speak kind of wishful, like you'd love to wear a billed shirt."

"I expect all of you to wear 'em when—when it's necessary—that is, when I'm married," said the happy Christopher authoritatively.

A Clean Man

Outside cleanliness is less than inside cleanliness. A man may scrub himself dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

prevents these diseases. It makes a man's insides clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, makes pure, clean blood, and clean, healthy flesh.

It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion as prostration. It contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs. Constipation is the most unclean uncleanliness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure it. They never gripe. Easy to take as candy.

A Pastoral Love Affair

Combination of the Natural and the Artificial.

By ARTHUR BEMERTON
Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Bessie and I fell in love naturally—in fact, too naturally. I have often thought how pleasant it must be for the animals and birds to mate without having to look into each other's record. A tiger may not only kill a man, but eat him and mate with a most respectable tigress without any questions being asked. Two birds may meet on the branch of a tree and without the slightest knowledge of each other become mates. But man and woman must not only know all about each other, but be of the same grade and each have a clean record, or there comes a lot of trouble.

And the most singular thing about it all is that either of them will murder any animal, except their own kind, and eat the carcass.

I, being an artist, when the buds were beginning to open went into the country to catch that first delicate shade of pale green which appears on the trees at that season. I was sitting on my tripod in a wood working in the colors when I heard the bark of a dog, and a moment later a little terrier stood growling at me. A girl, budding like the trees, not into leaves, but into womanhood, hurried up, calling in a soft voice:

"Frisk! Come away, Frisk! What do you mean?"

I paid no attention to the dog, and there was no need for the girl to call him off, for he had no idea of attacking me, but he gave me an excuse for addressing the girl.

And yet I question if any excuse was required. People who meet in crowds are constrained by conventionalities. We two, meeting in a wood, with not a sound about us—when the dog had ceased barking—except an occasional twitter of birds engaged in nest building, felt constrained in another way. We were impelled to be companionable. I began by telling her not to mind the dog, that he wouldn't disturb me, and she sidled around where she could catch a view of my sketch. One thing led to another until we felt quite well acquainted. I had chosen a delightful spot to transfer to canvas. It was on a declivity. An opening in the trees below revealed a patch of landscape, while at my feet gurgled a stream, at this season well supplied with water from snows recently melted at higher altitudes. The air was balmy and laden with perfumes.

One has but to mention this outline picture to indicate the result. Given an opening spring in a wood, buds, wild flowers, twittering birds, a vista, a brook, a dog and lastly a young man and a young woman, both in the first freshness of youth, what follows? Why, exactly what the poet says—the young man's (and the young woman's) fancy turns to thoughts of love.

The result of this meeting was another meeting and another and another. I didn't count them; I was too preoccupied to do so. I painted so long on my picture that before I finished it the delicate shade I had come to the country for had grown into a dark green and the full grown leaves had blotted out the vista which gave the work more than half its beauty. But while this beauty was disappearing the bud of love was opening.

So much for the natural features of this story. Now come the artificial—viz, a girl's confession to her father that she had met her fate, but had not met with any knowledge of that fate's antecedents; then a command from the father, tears from the girl and a triangular condition between the father, the girl and the artist such as has taken place ever since the first primeval girl planned to give her father the slip and climb a tree with the first primeval youth, the tree being too high for the old gentleman to follow. Bessie's father was really as reasonable as we considered him unreasonable. He merely wished to know who I was. Since I had lived in South America from the time I was two until twenty-two years of age I must send there for my credentials. Involving a delay of a month or more. What cruelty to force a pair of lovers to wait all that time in a state of suspense!

"Sweetheart," I said to her one day, "suppose the reply should come that I am an escaped defaulter, jailbird, murderer."

"I would not believe the story."

"But your father would," I added sentimentally.

One day, after having painted alone in the wood, on leaving it I saw some thing half covered with shriveled branches and dead leaves. I examined it and found the dead body of a man. Horrified lest I might be implicated in a murder, I threw back what I had removed and was about to hurry away when I saw two men coming for me. Within five minutes I was on my way to the nearest police station.

My antecedents were now not so much needed to enable me to possess my love as to preserve my neck. The status had changed a second time. The case was now not one of a father, a girl and an unknown man, but a father, a girl and an unknown man accused of murder. I sent at once a note to Bessie, informing her of my trouble, encouraging her to keep up a good heart and assuring her of my influence. I was not a party. I am proud that her father would not permit her to send a reply.

Brooding in my cell, I could not revert to the good old primeval times I have cited before when a suit might kill as many of his fellow beings as he pleased without being objected to on that score for a son-in-law. I had killed no one. I was merely suspected of killing a man. And if Bessie's father did not kill men he killed the next grade of animal below men—or other men did the work for him, which is just as criminal—and devoured the flesh. It seemed to me that the only logical beings are the beasts and the birds. They kill and eat each other without inquiring whether or no they are eating the same species, while man—well, this is what man does.

He kills and eats every animal below himself. To kill even one of his own kind he considers the greatest of crimes unless he kills them in battle, where the more men he kills the bigger man he is, which is exactly what made the chiefs among his savage ancestors.

I was so impressed with this reasoning that I asked my jailer for writing materials and wrote it down, or, rather, elaborated the bare skeleton I had thought out. When it was finished I asked to have it delivered to Bessie's father.

In due time a reply came as follows: I have always desired my daughter to marry a man distinguished for something. Artists and poets are usually distinguished for their idealism. You, being one of the kind, share that distinction. You may further lay claim to being the most impracticable of men, that, to my knowledge, the world has yet produced. You have interested me in your self and your case. I have retained the best criminal lawyer I can find to take charge of your case, and if your innocence is proved I shall deem my daughter honored in wedding such an eminent foe.

This reply stung me to the quick. I regarded it as tantamount to a refusal of his daughter's hand even if my innocence were proved. As to the lawyer he spoke of hiring for me, I wrote him immediately that I had engaged the most eminent counsel in the land and would have no need of the one he had retained.

What was my surprise, when I was folding and addressing this second letter, to receive a visit from Bessie.

She threw herself into my arms hysterically. I couldn't tell whether it was joy or grief that moved her. When she became calmer I spoke of her father's communication.

"Father has turned right around," she said. "He's your friend forever."

"Really?"

"Yes, really. He considers you innocent of this crime with which you are charged. He says that no man who could have written that letter could have committed murder and if he did he would convince the judge that there was no case against him, since there is no logical difference between killing a man and a steer."

"I am glad," I said, embracing her, "that in thousands of years one couple may in some respects return to the natural methods of our progenitors. Are you quite sure your father is sincere in his change of mind toward me?"

"I am. If he were not he would not have permitted me to come here to visit you. He says you are the first man he ever met who did not talk and act artificially. He's simply delighted with you."

I showed her the note I had written declining her father's offer of counsel. She burst out laughing. I asked what amused her.

"You haven't any money to pay counsel," she said.

"Upon my word! I never thought of that."

"You are ideal and impractical," she said. "That's the reason I love you."

And she embraced me.

Our colloquy was broken in upon by the sheriff, who came in to say that the real murderer had been arrested and had confessed. I was free to go. At the same time he handed me a letter postmarked Rio Janeiro.

"Ah," I exclaimed, "my credentials!"

Slipping the letter in my pocket, I accompanied Bessie to her father's house. He greeted me warmly, and I handed him the credentials I had received at the jail. Removing the envelope, he began to read, his eyes opening wider as he read.

"Are you a fool or a knave?" he asked, looking up at me.

"Both," I replied.

"What is it?" asked Bessie.

"Why, daughter, this pastoral business of yours has resulted in your catching the only son and heir of the biggest coffee planter in Brazil. I knew when I received his note that he was an original, but I didn't know he was rich. You tell me," addressing me, "that you are both fool and knave. Will you kindly inform me of the introspective reasoning by which you have arrived at this result?"

"Well," I replied, "no one but a fool who has the career before him that I have would spend his time sitting on a three legged stool in a wood daubing, and no one but a knave would make love to a girl without her father even knowing that he is doing it."

It was decided that Bessie and I should be married in June, and I concluded for my prospective father-in-law's sake—who must have a noted man for his daughter, even if a fool—to return to Brazil. I told Bessie's father that I should like to be married in the wood on a carpet of June roses, whereupon he said that he had had enough of that nonsense and didn't wish any more of it.

So we were married in a very matter of fact fashion at the bride's home of course, and sailed a few days later for my country.

I am now one of the most prominent citizens of Brazil and consequently much out of my element.

SIGNED IN A HURRY.

Curious Incident That Brought the Savage to Terms.

The ambassador who would protect his country's rights must exercise tact and call into use the deepest learning. And, after all, his plans may be frustrated or unexpectedly furthered by some happening entirely beyond his control. In a biography of Sir Robert Hart, Juliet Braden instances a treaty without parallel as a case of good luck.

During one of those terrible storms which periodically sweep the shores of Formosa an American vessel was wrecked and the crew eaten by the aborigines. The nearest American consul thereupon journeyed inland to the savage territory in order to make terms with the cannibals for future emergencies.

Unfortunately the chiefs refused to listen and would have nothing to do with the agreement prepared for their signature.

The consul was irritated by their obstinacy. He had a bad temper and a glass eye, and when he lost the first the second annoyed him. Under great stress of excitement he occasionally slipped the eye out for a moment, rubbed it violently on his coat sleeve, then as rapidly replaced it. This he did there in the council hut, utterly forgetful of his audience and before a soul could say the Formosan equivalent of "Jack Robinson."

The chiefs paled, stiffened, shuddered with fright. One with more presence of mind than his fellows called for a pen.

"Yes, quick, a pen!" the word passed from mouth to mouth. No more obstinacy, no more hesitation; all of them clamored to sign, willing, even eager, to yield to any demand that a man gifted with the supernatural power of taking out his eye and replacing it at pleasure might make.

FORCE OF LIGHTNING.

An Ordinary Stroke is About Equal to Fifty Thousand Horsepower.

Frequently surprise is expressed at the effect of a stroke of lightning which splinters a large tree or wrecks a tall chimney, but if the enormous power developed by an ordinary stroke of lightning is taken into consideration the wonder will be that the effect is so small.

Scientists estimate that an "ordinary" stroke of lightning is of 50,000 horsepower. That is force sufficient to drive the largest battleship ever built at top speed. The lightning stroke, however, travels at a speed of 186,000 miles per second. We think we see a flash of lightning, but as a matter of fact what we see is only the memory of a flash. The electrical current has been absorbed by the earth long before we are conscious of having seen the flash. A person struck by a direct flash would never see it.

The average electromotive force of a "bolt" of lightning is about 3,500,000 volts, and the current is 14,000,000 amperes. In such a "bolt" there is energy equal to 2,450,000 volts, or 3,284,132 horsepower. Some day a wizard will arise who will capture and bind a "bolt" of lightning and with it turn all the wheels of a great city.

The time required for the discharge of a "bolt" of lightning is about one twenty-thousandth of a second.—Chicago Tribune.

Nothing to Do.

The following bit, quoted from Lord Cromer by Helen Barrett Montgomery in her "Western Women in Eastern Lands," presents a picture of the monotony and deprivation of the life of the Egyptian lady that pages of statistics might fail to convey: The seclusion of women exercises a most baneful influence on eastern society. This seclusion by confining the sphere of woman's interest to a very limited horizon cramps the intellect and withers the mental development of one-half the population of Moslem countries.

An Englishwoman once asked an Egyptian lady how she passed her time.

"I sit on this sofa," she replied, "and when I am tired I cross over and sit on that."

DWARF ESSEX RAPE

Its Value for Hogs, Sheep and Cattle—Its Seeding.

A number of Bedford County farmers have been trying Dwarf Essex Rape for hog and sheep pasture for the last two seasons. Conditions for this plant were not favorable; but it is significant that all who have tried it are going to plant this year, some are going to plant a larger acreage, and a good many who have not planted it heretofore will plant it this year. It is undoubtedly a very valuable forage plant.

Planted early in the spring an acre of rape will furnish continuous pasture for from 16 to 20 shoats from about June 20 until it is covered with snow in the fall. The seed is inexpensive, costing only about 30 to 35c for enough to plant an acre.

Rape is rich in protein, the material needed to make bone and flesh, to build up the large frame needed as the basis for fattening off on grain.

Palatability: Where hogs have equal access to rape and grass they will stick to the rape as long as any of it remains, even digging out the roots, in preference to going on grass. Sheep and lambs also eat it with relish, and make splendid gains on it.

Precautions: When pasturing rape animals should have free access to both salt and water. This is particularly important with sheep and lambs. Under such conditions all stock will do well on rape. It has been used for partial pasture for milk cows, and is reported as having no bad effect on the flavor of the milk.

Rape will not do well in the shade, nor on spouty or wet land. It should not be pastured until it is from six to eight inches high. As a rule hogs will eat only the leaves; but if a "rooter" is found he should be ringed.

Value of Rape: It is an annual plant, furnishing immense quantities of succulent feed a very short time after seeding, and for a long period. It has about as beneficial an effect on the land as clover. Farmers who have used it for years have a saying that they are always sure of a good stand of grass after rape.

It may be seeded in corn at the last cultivation, and will furnish a large quantity of green feed during the late fall, besides benefitting the ground and furnishing humus for succeeding crops.

Preparation and Seeding: Rape is a gross feeder. It will pay heavy returns for liberal applications of manure; and, where heavy applications of manure are made, lime at the rate of not over 25 bushels per acre will help both it and the grass following.

The seed bed should be plowed early, harrowed the same day as plowed, and harrowed thereafter from time to time to keep the top soil loose (thereby preventing loss of soil water), and to get rid of the weeds. Rolling or dragging the seed bed makes a better stand; but if this is done the harrow should promptly follow the roller or drag.

It may be seeded with the drill, using the timothy box and sloping the dropping board forward, so that the seed falls in front of the hose. Let the hose drag lightly to cover the seed. Or it may be broadcast and harrowed in with smoothing harrow. If the ground cakes after rain and before the plants are up, run over it with the smoothing harrow to break the crust.

Plenty of manure and thorough preparation of the seed bed will pay heavy dividends in the stand and vigor of the plants.

Rape should be seeded at the rate of five to six pounds to the acre. I have procured a quantity of seed at wholesale, and it will be shipped to me here. It costs me $4.50 per 100 pounds and freight; that will make it cost a little over five cents a pound, 30 to 33c per acre.

When the supply sent for is exhausted I shall not send for any more. If you want any of this seed at cost, therefore, send me word promptly, telling me just what quantity you want.

Very truly yours,

GREAT CRIMINAL

MYSTERY SOLVED

Masked Man in Lewistown Narrows Robbery Uncovered by Detectives.

It is an almost startling development that in delving for the facts of a great mystery the solution of it should be found. Such is the striking feature of work undertaken in preparing for publication the story of "The Lone Bandit of Lewistown Narrows," which will appear in the Magazine Section of next Sunday's North American.

Two years ago a lone and unknown bandit startled the country by holding up and robbing one of the fastest express trains on the Pennsylvania Railroad in "The Narrows," near Lewistown. The very audacity of the performance stamped the robbery as one of the unique crimes of the age. From the day it was committed the criminal was a mystery until after the original manuscript story of the crime was prepared for publication in The North American. It was in checking up the incidents that inquiries were inspired the answering of which furnish the solution.

The story of the robbery is retold in fascinating style in the Sunday North American's article, and the solution that goes with it is also furnished. Because of the state-wide and country-wide interest in the solution of the great crime mystery, the demand for The North American will undoubtedly be enormous. Those who desire to read it should order the paper well in advance of Sunday.

About Banking by Mail

The Pittsburgh Bank for Savings, of Pittsburgh, Pa., whose advertisement appears in our columns from time to time, is one of the solid banking institutions of the country. It has been in continuous existence since 1862, and in that time has won the confidence of the people of Pittsburgh, who patronize it liberally, besides extending its business into all the countries of the world. By its system of banking through the mails, depositors may send their money or withdraw it, with absolute safety, and with as much promptness as the time necessary to take the letters to and from will permit. The officers and directors of this bank are men of the highest standing in the business and financial world, and they make it a point to guard the safety of the funds committed to their care. This is their first consideration. They also keep on hand for emergencies, twice as much money as the law requires. They will take pleasure in forwarding, free of charge, interesting literature showing how four per cent compound interest rapidly runs into a snug fortune.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

Just the right medicine for backache, rheumatism, Bright's disease and all urinary irregularities. C. Bichler, 2315 6th Ave., Altoona, Pa., says: "For several years I was troubled with my kidneys and bladder and 'tho I had taken different medicines I received no relief. Foley Kidney Pills were brought to my notice and I started using them. The first few doses relieved me and after using only a few bottles I am entirely cured of all kidney and bladder trouble. The action of my kidneys was irregular and painful and I was troubled with backaches and dizzy spells. Foley Kidney Pills were the means of restoring me to good health and I do not hesitate to recommend them." Ed. D. Heckerman.

ON TO MEXICO

By the time The Gazette reaches its readers some of the United States troops now headed for the Mexican border will have reached their destination and a number of war vessels now enroute will perhaps be ready for service along the coast of our neighbor on the south.

It has been leaking out for some time that the matter of sending troops to the Mexican border, to protect, if necessary, American property and capital invested within the boundaries of the sister nation, was contemplated and when a considerable portion of our army and navy were ordered to move in that direction for warlike "maneuvers," suspicion arose throughout the land as to the purpose of the Government in ordering the troops to move, but when it was learned that the soldiers were provided with cartridges that are not used in "maneuvers," it was plain that they were going for more than simple war play, but what the end will be is a matter of conjecture.

This nation is in a sense obligated to maintain peace in Mexico and protect foreign capital there. To one familiar with the history of the nation it does not look unlike a shift in our southern border line.

The Philadelphia Record

Of all the great city dailies there is none that stands as high in the estimation of out-of-town readers as The Philadelphia Record, which has built up an enormous circulation outside of Philadelphia as well as within strictly on its merits as a wholesome, wide-awake and fearlessly edited family newspaper.

The Record occupies a somewhat unique position as a Democratic paper published in the principal citadel of Republicanism and commanding a strong following even among the warmest supporters of opposing parties. The fact is that people of all political faiths, and of no political faith, want the news; they want it accurately presented, in the most readable form, and they want it uncolored by partisanship. This they get in The Record, which confines its editorial opinions to its editorial columns, and chronicles the world's doings just as they happen.

In building the foundations of The Record's popularity, broad and deep, however, its publishers have not depended solely upon its news appeal. They have made it the leading authority on sporting matters; its market quotations are the recognized standard of buying and selling in all the territory tributary to Philadelphia, and its regular departments devoted to the latest developments in agriculture, every-day science, house-keeping, fashions and woman's interests in general make it all but indispensable in the home and on the farm.

The Philadelphia Record is a newspaper that every member of the family wants to read, and that every member of the family profits by reading. It is clean, typographically and morally. There isn't a line in it that the head of the household feels he ought to cut out before passing it along to the women and children.

THIRTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Of the Huntingdon Home for Orphan and Friendless Children.

The Huntingdon Home for Orphan and Friendless Children closed its Thirtieth year March 1st.

To meet the larger demands and to co-operate with the general state work the name has been changed to Juniata Valley Children's Aid Society. The Home will be retained under the management of the society and will continue as before.

In the districting of the state, Huntingdon, Bedford, Mifflin, Juniata and Perry Counties form a natural group.

The assets of the Home will be transferred to the new Society. These consist of a property and equipment valued at $6,000 or $7,000, an endowment of several thousand dollars for support and a special fund in process. This fund, subscribed, has reached $25,000 and is being paid in.

In celebration of the thirtieth anniversary an effort will be made to increase this fund to $30,000. This we think can easily be done as there are numerous promises and prospects. Many persons will no doubt be willing to become identified with this movement now that success is assured.

For twenty-five years the Home was conducted without a deficit. The late years have been more difficult. We are now closing this period with an indebtedness of several thousand dollars due to necessary repairs and improvements of the Home, the increased cost of living and expenses incurred in raising the special endowment. This debt will be funded and the new society will start with a clean sheet.

The society aims to be as helpful as possible. We may not be able to offer relief at once to every case but we would be glad to know of every child needing care in the district. We are seeking good homes for children, and while we cannot promise to fill all applications promptly, we would be pleased to know of every home in which a child would be welcomed.

We can often supply children through other agencies and can often secure care for children in other institutions or hospitals.

Don't let any poor child suffer. The Juniata Valley Children's Aid Society has the possibilities of doing a great work, but to carry it forward we will need funds. May we not hope to have a large number of contributors to current expenses for the coming year?

Do not wait to be solicited, but send contributions to J. R. Simpson, Treasurer, Huntingdon, Pa.

Note—Owing to the continued illness of D. Emmert, General Secretary, following a very serious surgical operation last fall, a full report of the work to date with plans for the future is deferred.

HECKERMAN LETTER

Salesman Writes of Industrial Condition of the South.

McMinnville, Tenn., March 4.

This is a beautiful town, nice squares and good sidewalks, (when there has not been any rain for quite a while). There is a wide scope of country to draw from and from this territory King, Ragland & Company get most of their trade. It is the only wholesale house here and they do a large business both here and at Murfreesboro. They quite recently built a very large brick store house from which they sell Fort Bedford P-nuts and Fort Bedford P-nut butter. Henry King is the "head and shoulders" of both the houses. He is a mighty pleasant gentleman, one who has made barrels of money. God certainly gave him ten talents instead of five. With all his wealth he lacks one thing—a good wife—but he is a whole team in one frame. 'Twas he who has given me the data from which I write this letter. He lives at Murfreesboro, Tenn., one of the oldest towns in the state, yet it has many elegant homes, which show a style and degree of wealth that we do not often see in a Southern town.

The court house which was partially destroyed by fire by the Northern soldiers during the Civil War, still stands in the middle of the street. Of course it has been remodeled. This is a great market for cedar and it is so scarce that the lead pencil men pay the farmer seven and a half cents per pound for his old cedar rails that are sound. The American and the Eagle pencil companies each have large plants here in which they employ over five hundred hands. It is the largest red cedar market in the world. About a mile from town is the fat rack, the center of the state.

Murfreesboro is an educational town. The Middle Tennessee State Normal School is here, the buildings of which cost the state $250,000. It has a daily attendance of a thousand. Then there is a Baptist school, Tennessee College for Girls, with about 250 in attendance. Then we have the Soule College for Girls, a private affair with 150 enrolled. Last, but not least, we have the Murfreesboro School for Boys. There are only 125 boys attending this. Woe be to the old maids I fear.

The water that supplies the town comes from a big spring half a mile out and is hard, limestone.

Three banks attend to the monetary part of the town while two hotels feed the hungry for fifty cents a meal. Here is where they have dandy roads, fourteen pikes lead you to the town where you can buy what you want as cheap as anywhere else in the state. Their convicts are worked on the roads and they earn their bread. They are watched over during their work by a number of guards, each being armed with a Winchester. A couple bloodhounds accompany each and every squad of prisoners. Here King, Ragland and Company have another large wholesale grocery house.

The South enjoys practically a monopoly in the production of the cotton supply of the world. The demand for the long staple or fiber which is grown largely in Georgia commands twice the price of the short staple or fiber which is grown in all other sections where the "fleece white" is grown. The demand for the fiber and for all cotton seed products is constantly on the increase thus insuring the profitability of cotton growing.

The Southern planter is learning how to meet this demand and at the same time to diversify his crops by the adoption of methods which will result in his increasing the production per acre. The annual value of the cotton crop of the South, including the seed, is said to be $900,000,000.

While this virtual monopoly of the cotton crop or production of the world is a great advantage to the Southern planter, this section of God's domain is by no means a one-crop region. Climatic and soil conditions are favorable to the successful production of nearly all of the staple crops of the North and of others that cannot be grown in more Northern localities. Early fruits and vegetables can be and are grown in abundance. A large variety of forage crops and a long grazing season make the South an ideal region for stock raising. The razor-backed hogs, with snouts long and pointy enough to drink from a cream pitcher, root the gum off the roots of trees and live on this during the short season when the grass will not support them.

Agriculture all over the South is very progressive, yet one hears on every corner the old residents say, "If only some more of your good Pennsylvania farmers would come down here and show us how to farm it would make our whole South one Garden of Eden."

The statistics of the folks in charge at Washington show most gratifying increase in the yield per acre of all the staple crops, but you must not be when to plant your seed and how to care for the growing crop, and not be like one of the professors at one of your Northern colleges who planted beans and when they came up and brought the old beans with them, pulled up the stalk and replanted it, or the man who had a small pig in a small pen; the pig grew and the pen did not. What next? Why, the man swapped his big pig for a wee one that could be put in the self same pen. Now stop that snickering.

The corn crop in the Southeastern States in 1910 was by far the largest in their history. J. H. Moore, a 15-year-old boy of South Carolina, raised 228 bushels of ears on an acre in 1910. The South is today experiencing a splendid industrial development on the solid basis of the conversion of Southern raw materials into manufactured articles. One county in North Carolina has today thirty cotton mills in full operation, manufacturing the cotton into fabric. A few years ago this cotton was all taken to the East where it was converted into such goods as today are turned out by the cotton mills of the South. Tobacco, timber, iron, clay and hides form the raw materials of a large variety of Southern industries. Profitable production in any locality, North or South, is dependent by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

We understand that our boys did themselves credit in a game of basket ball at Bedford Monday night.

Jason John, who has been on the sick list for some time, was removed from his shanty to the home of Joseph Barber several days ago.

Mr. Barber is to be commended for the act of kindness shown in taking the unfortunate old man into his own home, where he can better administer to his needs. Mr. Barber will surely be rewarded.

MRS. ELLA GILCHRIST

PASTOR WELCOMED

Rev. Wieand and Family Greeted at Reception.

Last Friday evening the members of Trinity Lutheran Church, Bedford, gave a most enjoyable reception in the lecture room of the church in honor of Rev. H. E. Wieand and family. The receiving party consisted of the members of the church council with their wives. The guests of honor were Rev. H. E. Wieand, Mrs. Wieand and Mrs. Sener of Lancaster, mother of Mrs. Wieand.

A large number of the membership of the church were present to meet the guests and all of the other denominations of the town were represented. The room was tastefully decorated. The Sunday School Orchestra and the young men of the church rendered excellent music during the reception.

After all persons present had been presented to the pastor and his family, delicious refreshments, for which the ladies of the church are noted, were served. As a climax to this pleasant occasion Rev. Wieand was called upon and in a speech replete with wit, wisdom and eloquence, made his introductory bow to the congregation and to the good people of the community. Addresses of felicitation and good will were also made by Rev. J. W. Lingle of the Friend's Cove Lutheran Charge; B. F. Wilson in behalf of the Methodist Church; Prof. C. R. Hoechst in behalf of the Reformed Church, Prof. J. A. Wright in behalf of the Presbyterian Church, and by Dr. S. H. Gump.

All persons present joined heartily in welcoming Rev. Wieand and his family into our community and in wishing them success. The spirit of good will and active purpose was everywhere present, and we predict that Rev. Wieand's work as pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church will meet with the success his ability and activity warrant.

David M. Steele

David M. Steele died at the home of his son, Calvin Steele, in Saxton, Wednesday, March 1, aged 85 years. He is survived by the following children: Mrs. G. H. Gibboney of Everett, Mrs. Ella Black of Altoona, George F. of Cedar Rapids, Ia., James G. of Everett, Harry M., Oliver E. and Calvin W., of Saxton; also the following sisters: Mrs. Lydia Whittaker of Huntingdon, Mrs. Matilda Ritchey of Loysburg, Mrs. Louisa Snyder of Saxton and Mrs. Sarah Ream of Shipensburg.

Mr. Steele was a lifelong resident of Liberty Township, where he followed the occupation of farmer up until a few years ago. He took an active interest in affairs, serving his township in a number of offices. He

ROYAL Baking Powder Economy

The manufacturers of Royal Baking Powder have always declined to produce a cheap baking powder at the sacrifice of quality.

Royal Baking Powder is made from pure grape cream of tartar, and is the embodiment of all the excellence possible to be attained in the highest class baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price, and is more economical at its price than any other leavening agent, because of the superlative quality and absolute wholesomeness of the food it makes.

Mixtures made in imitation of baking powders, but containing alum, are frequently distributed from door to door, or given away in grocery stores. Such mixtures are dangerous to use in food. In England, France, Germany and some sections of the United States their sale is prohibited by law. Alum is a dangerous mineral acid, and all physicians condemn baking powders containing it.

The label of alum baking powders must show the ingredients.

was a faithful member of the Reformed Church for a number of years.

The funeral services were held in the Reformed Church, conducted by Rev. M. A. Kieffer of Everett. Interment was made in St. Luke's Cemetery.

Point

March 7.—The revival services are progressing with increasing interest, and mostly heads of families are the seekers. The church is crowded ever night.

George McFarlin moved some of his property to Henry Kline's last week. Reports say that he has bought the property of Ed. Keller, better known as the "Border property," near Springhope. Mr. Keller will soon have sale and move to Windber.

William H. Jordan of Windber spent several days last week in this community on business.

The serious illness of Levi Miller and wife, of near Mann's Choice, still continues. Some of the family of J. M. Cable are with the old people all the time.

We have lots of snow but the falls are just about enough to make the roads muddy.

Dogs have been doing some damage among the sheep along the valley road between this place and Schellsburg, on the farms of John Rock, George Miller and Timio Horn. It would be pleasant news to hear that the dogs were caught and killed, as there are entirely too many half-starved dogs roaming the country, killing sheep and eating all the eggs that they can get at. THE PUEBLOS OF ACOMO AND LAGUNA Indian Villages of New Mexico That Date Back Before the Conquest—Our First Americans in Their First Homes.

(Written for The Gazette by M. J. Brown, Editor Little Valley, N. Y. Hub.)

Before closing this series of letters I want to tell you a little of two ancient inhabited pueblos that I have only mentioned in former letters, Acoma and Laguna, but which are no less wonderful and strange than Taos or Zuni, and are typical of Indian life back in the days before white men came to America.

We live in an age of automobiles, bird men, wireless talk, and trust made goods, and there is nothing new under the sun.

But right here in our own country—of which we know so pitifully little—there are some OLD things, conditions and people that date back before history and tradition. And when a 1911 American drops down into these 1540 Indian towns and tries to tell what he sees and what he feels—well, he simply can't make the assignment good.

The Santa Fe spoiled Laguna. When that railroad blasted its lines through the solid rock at the foot of this Indian village it made a museum of Laguna and took away the old smell. Today the Indian mama has to watch out for the 10:45 and see that her young Indians are off the track.

I passed a few hours in Laguna—just a wait between trains. It is a cliff-built village, not as old as many of the other community houses of the southwest, but old enough to be on the map. It was founded in 1699 and has been doing business since—an offsprung from Acoma.

Like the most of the Pueblo villages, Laguna is really one great house—a village where the houses join, a bee hive. The houses are of stone and are built up the side of a solid rock cliff. What the object of building on this barren cliff was, only the contractors of the old days knew, and they are past the telling. A half mile out on the prairie is a splendid village site, but the Indians chose this rocky hill. The generally accepted reason is that this village was built for protection—as a fort.

I got off at Laguna. The day before a lumber train had gone over the bank and piled up a modern wreck. The great engine of 1911 lay there on its side, while the Indian boys of over two centuries ago climbed over its mass of broken steel and rubbed their hands over the polished sides of a steel horse made by the Brooks Locomotive Works in Dunkirk, N. Y. It made me think of that celebrated painting, where the Indians had massacred a pack train, and found an illustrated paper which they had gathered around. It made me think of Salem and then Broadway.

Laguna is built on an island of rock, and its walls rise high above the surrounding plane, built of stone, terraced one above the other. For hundreds of years the Pueblo Indians have lived here and they live today just as they have always lived. They retain their habits and customs of the time before the conquest and do not conform to the white man's ways. Many years ago the Santa Fe Railroad almost cut the village in two, but the Indians never by any sign or change noted its coming. They live just as they have always lived and just as they always will live. Civilization and development can have no part in their lives. They are of the old days.

Just before the sun set behind the desert plain, I sat on a rock at the foot of this village and watched twilight activity in this old town. From almost every direction the Indians were coming in, singly and in groups, some with sacks of grain, some with wood, some on foot, others on ponies—all coming home for the night. And by my observation place came an old man, an Indian long past the century mark, they told me, a man dim of sight and feeble of foot. This old fellow had been sitting on a rock for hours, watching the white man's trains go by, and no doubt thinking back to the time when the Red Men dominated the Southwest. The old man turned his dim eyes to me, stopped, made sign with his arm and then crawled up the cliff to his coop.

It is only when the through trains stop at Laguna that you see the Indians as they are not, see them at a vocation utterly foreign to their natures. And then it is only the squaws and the children who ply the trade—selling pottery and beadwork. They walk around the observation car, showing their wares, looking at you from those old Indian eyes, wishing you to buy, but never asking. They are not peddlers; they can't "trade." A little decorated dish is fifteen cents, but you can't buy two for a quarter—they can't understand that. If you offered to buy all they had if they would give you a nickel off, they would simply shake their heads. They have fixed a price and that price goes or it doesn't go. There is no Yankee streak in these Indians. They hate to sell you anything, but they know smoking tobacco comes easy this way.

You can't mix it with these village Indians, you simply can't get chummy. You can crawl through their village and offer them every inducement to be neighborly, but they act as if they don't see you. They have a crust thicker than Euclid Avenue. They will look over you, beyond you, but not at you, and as plain as actions can say it they will tell you to get out.

Twenty miles southwest from Laguna is Acoma—the most wonderful of the many pueblos of New Mexico. Like Zuni it is far back from the railroads—one of the remote pueblos that we Americans know little or nothing of. When the Spanish explored this region, three hundred and thirty years ago, the Acomos were living there—and they live today just as they lived then, and nothing but the white man's law of survival, and that law literally enforced will ever change their present life.

The driver told me, and tradition told him, that many hundreds of years ago Acoma was a village on top of an island mesa, where the Indians fled for self-protection. A great rock, with a stairway, afforded them a Gibraltar defense against any of the wandering tribes who thought war was easier and cheaper than agriculture. But one day a cyclone swept away the stairway, and Acoma had to lay out a new village.

Nobody knows how old Acoma was when the first white man found it. Coronado could find no tradition or anything that started at the beginning. It was so old that its history was forgotten when the first Europeans came up in 1540. It is the most picturesque and most natural of the many communal dwellings of the unknown Southwest, and an American can hardly believe that he is yet in our own boasted civilization, our own progressive America, when he looks up at this strange village built by our first Americans—founded while yet the people of the old world scoffed at Columbus and his world-round theories.

Lummis gives us a little interesting history regarding these Indians, and the part that Catholic superstition had in their early lives. It all came about over an old Spanish painting—a picture that hangs today in the Indian church in Acoma—a square of dim canvas that wealth could not buy.

A white headed old man at Laguna remembered something of the story and the famous law suit which was taken into the white men's courts, and from his recollections and Chas. Lummis' story I give a brief outline.

Nearly three hundred years ago, a Catholic priest founded a mission at Acoma and when he dedicated the little mud chapel that he built with his own hands, he hung therein a Spanish painting of some saint.

To the unlearned Indians this picture became an object of veneration, and they believed that good fortune would ever come to them with its possession, and generation after generation it was treasured.

IT GROWS HAIR

But Not After the Hair Root is Dead.

F. W. Jordan will tell you that he sells a great many bottles of Parisian Sage because it gives satisfaction. He guarantees it to eradicate dandruff, stop falling and splitting hair and itching scalp, or money back.

Parisian Sage will make hair grow if the hair root is not dead; it puts life and luster into dull and faded hair, and is the most delightful hair dressing in the world. Only 50 cents a large bottle.

"I have used Parisian Sage and it is the best hair grower and beautifier, dandruff cure, and scalp cleaner I have ever used."—Mrs. H. I. Fulton, Oakley Ave., Lynchburg, Va., June 6, 1910.

Many years later drought and famine afflicted Laguna. Their cattle starved and their crops failed, while but twenty miles away Acoma prospered.

Then the head men of Laguna visited Acoma and asked to be loaned the picture until bad luck could be driven from their lands.

Acoma let them take the painting, and it is said that as soon as it was hung on the walls of their church the rains descended and prosperity returned, and so great was their faith in the painting that they refused to return it. Then war was threatened. After much parleying Acoma agreed to let the matter be decided by lot, and an Indian girl drew the ballots from a box. Fortune favored Acoma and the great picture was taken back to its first home.

But the next night an armed band from Laguna broke open the chapel at Acoma and carried away the sacred picture. Acoma was raging. War inevitable. But the parish priest counseled peace, and begged the Indians to submit the case to the white man's justice. He prevailed and an action was brought in the district court of New Mexico, and Judge Benedict heard and decided the case in favor of Acoma.

When the court's decision was given, Acoma went after the picture, armed and expecting trouble. Half way to Laguna they found the painting by the side of the trail, and to this day the Indians believe that the picture made the trip alone and was on its way to its rightful home when they met it.

And this is one of the many interesting stories and legends of the interesting and unknown southwest—one of the little stories of the life of these simple-minded village Indians—of a people that live the simple life today as they lived it when America was their own country—of a people who can not change.

Next week I will clean up the little odds and ends of a note book and close until next year the descriptive letters. And next year I hope to tell you of new places and odd corners that you know but little of—and try to make interesting another series of letters.

Lesson XI.—First Quarter, For March 12, 1911.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, II Kings iv, 25-37. Memory Verses, 32-35—Golden Text, Rom. vi, 23—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The power of the Lord God of Elijah was first seen through Elisha in the dividing of the Jordan, the Lord doing for one man what He had just done for two, and long before for a whole nation under Joshua. It is nothing with the Lord to help with many or few. The power of the Lord is next seen in the healing of the waters of Jericho, then in the chastening of the young men who mocked Elisha, telling him to go up as Elisha had done; after that in the ditches filled with water, for the sake of Jehoshaphat, without either wind or rain.

In the beginning of our lesson chapter we see the same power multiplying the widow's oil until every empty vessel was filled, all her need supplied and something over.

Now we have in today's lesson the filling of a childless home with gladness by the gift of a no doubt longed for child and the restoration of a deeper joy by giving him back from the dead.

A great woman of Shunem felt constrained as she saw Elisha pass her house from time to time to ask him in to eat bread, and it became his habit to do this. Later she suggested to her husband that they provide him a room with a bed, a table, a stool and a candlestick, and he seems gratefully to have accepted their kindness. Then the question arose in his mind, How can I in any way recompense this loving kindness? On inquiry he found that she needed no favor from any one, but at the reminder from Gehazi that they had no children he asked the Lord for this favor for her, and receiving the assurance that it would be so, he communicated to her the fact, which she at first received very unbelievably (verse 16), but as Elisha had assured her so it came to pass.

We think of Sarah and her unbelieving laughter, and yet in her case it came to pass, for "Is anything too hard for the Lord?" (Gen. xviii, 9-14). We look onward to Elizabeth and Zacharias and note the unbelief of the latter (Luke 1, 18-20), and yet in their case it came to pass also. So we are taught to "Be not afraid, only believe" (Mark v, 36), and rely on Jer. xxxiii, 3.

It may have been that the child became too much of an idol—we do not know—but one day in the field with the reapers he complained of his head, was carried home and died on his mother's knees at noon. She laid the little body on Elisha's bed, shut the door, and without telling her husband why she made all possible speed to the man of God, who was then at Mount Carmel. Seeing her afar off, he sent his servant Gehazi to inquire of her if it was well with her and her husband and the child. Her reply was, "It is well," but she hurried on till she came to Elisha, and she held him by his feet, and with the very words which Elisha himself used to Elijah she clung to him until he arose and went with her (verse 30, with chapter ii, 2, 4, 6).

Gehazi preceded them and laid the staff of Elisha upon the child, but there was no effect upon the child, no response, neither voice nor hearing. When Elisha came he went in and shut the door and prayed unto the Lord and then stretched himself upon the child, mouth to mouth, eyes to eyes, hands to hands, and the flesh of the child waxed warm. After walking to and fro in the house he again stretched himself upon the child, and the child sneezed seven times and opened his eyes. The mother was called, and with gratitude that cannot be described she took up her son and went out.

The next verses describe a deliverance from death that might have taken away many, and the chapter closes with a miraculous multiplication of bread—life given, life restored, life saved. Life sustained, completing nine instances thus far of the power of God seen through Elisha. Elisha was to this woman a man of God, a holy man of God (verses 9, 10, 21, 22, 25, 27); not so Gehazi. She saw something of God in Elisha. He was to her in God's stead. We are here in Christ's stead, and people should see something of Him in us (II Cor. iv, 11; v, 20). Let the woman's pressing on to Elisha remind us that we must come to God Himself through Jesus Christ alone and not through any mortal man.

Ordinances may be as useless as Elisha's staff. It is life that is needed, though there may be life associated with ordinances in the hands of some, but not through such as Gehazi.

Compare the story of Elijah bringing a boy to life in I Kings, xvii, 10-22, and note the parallels of the prophet alone with the child, the child in the prophet's bed, the prayer, stretching himself upon the child. May we earnestly covet such lives of nearness to God as these men lived and be used of Him to bring life to many dead souls. There must be the "alone with God," the believing prayer, the persistent waiting upon God, the close personal touch of life itself, not of a rod or staff, even though it be that of a prophet.

Surgeon used to say that this stretching of oneself to a child was the hardest kind—a stretching downward to make yourself as far as possible one with the child; seeing, speaking and handling things as the child would, a putting yourself in his place.

Brooklyn, March 5.—Pastor Russell preached this afternoon in Brooklyn's largest Auditorium and in the evening held a Question Meeting. Both services were crowded and at both eager and deep interest was manifest. The text of the afternoon service was, "Thenceforth there shall be no more [death of] an infant of days, nor of an old man who hath not filled his days. For the dying one shall be but the child at an hundred years old—a sinner at a hundred years old, he shall be accursed"—cut off from life (Isaiah lvi, 20). The speaker said:

Our text is a part of the Divine prophecy of the blessings which will come to Israel and to the whole world during Messiah's glorious reign of a thousand years—beginning with the close of this Gospel Era. Succeeding verses tell that in that glorious Epoch landlording will be a thing of the past. "They shall build houses and inhabit them; they shall plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them; they shall not build and another inhabit; they shall not plant and another eat." Additionally we read, "They shall not labor in vain nor bring forth for trouble." Further we read that then the "Wolf and the lamb shall feed together and the lion shall eat fodder like the bullock."

No Spiritual Sheep, Oxen, Wolves, Etc.
No end of confusion has been created by the intent of well-meaning people to apply these prophecies as the reward of the Church in heaven. Nothing in the Scriptures warrants us in thinking that there will be spiritual, heavenly sheep and oxen, wolves and lions, vines and houses, planting and building. Those who reject the clear Bible teaching respecting a Messianic reign of righteousness cannot understand the Bible at all. Not a single passage of the Old Testament tells of heavenly hopes or promises. Only a few of them teach heavenly things at all, and then indirectly.

As, for instance, in the types of the Old Testament the garments of the High Priest, glorious and beautiful, symbolize, we believe, the heavenly grandeur, honors and glories of Messiah during the period of His reign. Similarly God's promise to Abraham declares that His Seed, His posterity, shall be as the stars of heaven and as the sands of the seashore. Nothing in this statement would necessarily teach a heavenly state or condition. Only by the aid of the New Testament and the Holy Scriptures' illumination can we see the two Seeds of Abraham are distinctly referred to, the stars indirectly implying the Spiritual Seed, while the sands of the seashore refer to Abraham's Natural Seed. As it is written, "I have constituted Thee a father of many nations"—like unto God.

So the Spiritual Seed of Abraham is now being developed. With its completion this Age will end, and the Natural Seed of Abraham will return to special favor and become the leading nation of the world under the guidance and direction of the spiritual and invisible, yet All-Powerful, Kingdom of Messiah.

The blessing through natural Israel will gradually extend to every nation, in that the door will be opened by which all nations may come in to and become a part of Abraham's Seed, and thus into harmony with Messiah's Kingdom. Whosoever refuses this great privilege and blessing of Messiah's Kingdom will be destroyed from amongst the people in the Second Death.

Hundred-Year-Old Children
Centenarians of the present time are few, and they by no means are like children. Usually they are wrinkled and haggard. We are to remember, however, the Bible record that several of the earlier members of Adam's race lived nine hundred years, or rather, they were more than nine hundred years in coming fully under the sentence against sinners—"By one man's disobedience sin entered into the world, and death as a result of sin; and thus death passed upon all men, because all are sinners (Romans v, 12)."

Gradually, and especially since the flood, when a great change took place in our cosmogony, human longevity has decreased, while mental, moral and physical ailments have increased. Several of Adam's children did not have their first born child until after they were a century old. In confirmation of this, and correspondingly in contradiction of the Evolution theory, we find that the Ancients were stronger than we, mentally as well as physically; for they intermarried brothers with sisters and cousins without injury, whereas today the mental weakness of the race is such that one out of every one hundred and fifty adults is in an insane asylum, and the marriage of brothers and sisters is prohibited, and even the marriage of second cousins is disapproved and held responsible for increasing weak-mindedness.

We see, then, that our text, describing Messiah's Kingdom, merely explains that Restitution blessings will recover mankind from the effects of the fall, so that it shall then be as it was in Adam's day—that full human rightness, maturity, will be reached in a century and that a man dying then would be dying in childhood as compared with the remainder of the race. The further guarantee is that none will die even at a hundred years of age, except wilful sinners who, refusing to submit themselves to the regulations of Messiah's Kingdom, will then be cut off from life as unworthy of any further favor at the hands of the great Redeemer—Messiah—all of whose dealings will represent Divine Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power.

Man's Years as a Tree's
The Scriptures tell us that under Messiah's Kingdom the days of a man shall be as the days of a tree. And it is believed that some trees live to be at least a thousand years old. This is God's provision for every man—every member of the human family—after He shall have accomplished the work of this Gospel Age, the selection of the Spiritual Seed of Abraham, typified by the priests and Levites, "The Church of the First-born, whose names are written in heaven."

Messiah's Kingdom is to dominate the earth for a thousand years, with a view to blessing Adam and all of his posterity—with a view to uplifting them from sin and degradation and death. The uplifting influences will begin at once, following the great time of trouble with which the Kingdom will be inaugurated. The judgments of the Lord will be abroad in the earth and the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness. None shall longer need say to his neighbor or his brother, "Know thou the Lord; for all shall know Him, from the least unto the greatest of them," for "the knowledge of the Lord shall fill the whole earth" (Jer. xxxi, 34; Isaiah xi, 9).

Whoever, then, by obedience to the laws of the Kingdom will avail himself of the blessed privileges of Restitution (Acts iii, 19-21), will not only be helped upward out of mental, moral and physical imperfection, step by step toward perfection, but, so long as he progresses, he may live—clear down to the end of that blessed thousand years. If we had never seen trees; if our own experiences had been with vegetation such as perishes within a year, we might have difficulty in believing some one who would tell us of having seen trees centuries old. Such a statement would seem as unreasonable to us as to tell us that humanity could live for a thousand years or forever.

Have we not indeed seen children old and wrinkled looking, yet only in their teens? And have we not seen others cheerful, fresh and comparatively young-looking at sixty and seventy?

All Unrighteousness is Sin
At the present time God "winks" at much of the wrong-doing that there is in the world. He does not interfere with it. But of course every transgression carries with it naturally more or less of a depraving influence on the transgressor's mind and body. The conscience is the most tender and the most important element of our human nature. Whoever violates it, whoever injures it, much or little, will proportionately be disadvantaged in the future and will have all the more difficulty in rising

WATCH YOUR SYMPTOMS

DANGEROUS IF YOU NEGLECT THEM. DON'T DELAY. ACT NOW

Do you ever have a "kick" in your back? Do you find it difficult to stoop over? Do you experience excruciating pain in the "small" of your back when rising from a chair or in changing from one position to another? Were the kidneys strong and healthy instead of being weak this form of backache would be unknown.

Women have backache principally from two causes: First, weak kidneys, which fail to filter the uric acid from the blood; second, from a diseased condition of the ovaries, causing a congestion of the monthly flow, resulting in painful and unnatural menstruation.

MARSH ROOT makes the kidneys strong and active and removes the uric acid which causes the pain, while HIT PRESCRIPTION No. 666 FOR THE BLOOD builds up the blood, increases its circulation, and regulates the monthly flow.

GRAVEL STONE IN THE BLADDER.
This disease is more prevalent in limestone regions, where the drinking water is hard, and among persons who are inclined to be scrofulous. It is caused by an excess of limy or sandy matter in the blood, which forms in the kidneys and bladder into stones from the size of a pea to that of an egg. Persons with this disease have great difficulty in passing their urine, which is thick and ropy with deposits. MARSH ROOT cures Gravel by dissolving the stones and deposits so that they are carried off with the urine by making the kidneys and bladder strong and healthy they do not form again.

DIABETES SUGAR IN THE URINE.
This disease is known by the enormous quantities of urine voided which is filled with sugar. It is the most wasting of diseases of the kidneys and bladder, as the food we eat is turned into sugar and is carried off through the urine instead of making good, rich blood and nerve force that gives you strength and keeps up your body. The digestion plays a very important part in this disease, and relief can be obtained much sooner if you procure MARSH ROOT to build up the digestive organs.

THOUSANDS HAVE IT AND DO NOT KNOW IT UNTIL TOO LATE.
Kidney diseases are generally found in persons whose blood is impoverished or impure, and whose nerves have not sufficient power or force to make the kidneys perform their proper function. The duty of the kidneys is to filter the blood, and when this fluid is filled with nitric acid and malarial poison they become over-burdened with extra work. When the nerves are not strong, they fail to supply the power to do this work then the kidneys become clogged and disease sets in. Kidney complaint usually commences with cold chills, especially in the back and loins, followed with fever and pain. The pain extends to the bladder, loins and thighs. The urine becomes highly colored or extremely light. It sometimes looks red or blood-like, with brick dust sediment after standing, or it may be stringy or milky and filled with albumen, the most vital element of the body.

When these conditions are allowed to continue they result in one or more of the following conditions: Backache, Weak Back, Rheumatism, Gout, Diabetes, Bright's Disease, Gravel, Irritation of the Bladder, Scalding of the Urine, Swelling of the Ankles, Dropsy, or some other form of Kidney or Urinary Trouble. MARSH ROOT has a direct and specific action in all forms of Kidney, Bladder and Urinary Troubles, and it is the only remedy that cures by the building up process, which gives the kidneys strength to cast off all poisonous matter from the blood, thus stopping the cause of all diseases of this nature.

Note to Mothers: DR. CAREY'S MARSH ROOT has proven itself to be the best known remedy for Bed-Wetting in children and old people. For use in this direction only, DR. CAREY'S MARSH ROOT is worth its weight in gold. You will swear by MARSH ROOT after using it. It cures.

up gradually out of his degradation and weaknesses, even with all the helps that will then be available. Thus will be fulfilled the Scriptural declaration, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that also shall he reap."

With all mankind redeemed there will be nothing whatever of the past chargeable against any on the books of Divine Justice. The great "High Priest," by his better sacrifices, will have made full satisfaction to the demands of Justice, but the weaknesses, mental, moral and physical, resulting from more or less wilful and deliberate sin, must still be reckoned on, and thus every idle word and every idle thought, every idle and vicious action of the present time, by making its mark upon the characters of men, is providing for corresponding difficulties on their part in that glorious day of their opportunity.

The suggestion of our text is that the great Messiah will not temporize, for the entire period of His reign, with those who do not show a proper appreciation of opportunities when fully brought in contact with them and clearly understanding the terms of Divine grace. But one hundred years is quite a considerable period of probation and surely every reasonable mind will concede that so long a delay in meeting out the full penalty of sin, Second Death, manifests the extreme limit of reasonable mercy.

The Church's Triumph Shorter
The Church, whose trial is in progress during this Gospel Age, receives individually a much shorter period of probation than our text declares will be granted to mankind in the future. God's saintly people are expected to develop character and to approve themselves to God as "overcomers" within a very brief space of life. And not only so, but they are required to "walk by faith and not by sight." They merely have God's Word as respects His Justice and Love and gracious plans, while, in the next Age, the world will have the actuality instead of the promise—the world will walk by sight. "The glory of the Lord shall be revealed and all flesh shall see it together" (Isaiah xi, 5).

The world during Messiah's reign will be privileged to walk in a highway of holiness, from which all the stumbling stones will have been gathered out. But the overcomers of the Church are required to walk in the narrow way, steep, narrow, rugged, and beset with snares of the Adversary. "For we are not ignorant of his snares" (II Corinthians ii, 11).

We are not to forget, however, that these differences between the Church and the world are fully offset by the differences of reward. The overcomers of the Church are to be rewarded with glory, honor, immortality, "the divine nature," and be joint-heirs in the Kingdom as members of the great Messiah. The world is to have no such change of nature from human to spirit, but is to have the earthly nature restored or perfected in them, if obedient, and to enjoy the earthly Eden. Truly God's ways are equal. True and righteous are Thy ways, Lord God Almighty! (Revelation xv, 3-4).

Humanity's Final Test
The Church's test takes place in the present life. And in each member thereof the matter of worthiness or unworthiness of eternal life on the spirit plane for all time is determined at death. Not so with humanity in general. As we have just seen, some may live for only a hundred years and then be cut off in the Second Death, because found unworthy of further opportunity. Others, by availing themselves of the privileges and rendering obedience to the laws of the Kingdom, may live to the very close of the thousand years, and be found unworthy of eternal life. Still others may so fully appreciate Divine Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power and may become so obedient thereto that God will be pleased to grant them eternal life. Their days, their lives, will be far more than the days of a tree.

The world of mankind, at the conclusion of Messiah's reign of righteousness, will have attained again the perfection originally enjoyed by father Adam. Like him they will be in Eden, which then will be world-wide. Those perfect human beings will be required to stand a test—to demonstrate, to prove their absolute loyalty to God and his righteous laws, as Adam was tried, tested, proven in Eden. As Adam was promised eternal life if his test proved him loyal to his Maker, so his restored race will have before them the offer of eternal life if they shall manifest their obedience satisfactorily.

Satan Loosed From Prison
We are not informed of the particulars of the test that will then be applied to mankind. We merely have the figurative declaration that Satan, sin and everything which Satan represents will be loosed for a little season at the close of Messiah's reign (Revelation xx, 7-10). The world, full of perfected humanity, "as the sand of the seashore," will all be subjected to the test. But how many, or what proportion of the whole, will prove loyal, and what proportion disloyal, we are not informed.

All that we know on the subject, and all that is necessary for us to know, is that the trial will be thorough and just and that all found faithful will have eternal life, and all found unfaithful will be counted as followers of Satan and, with him, will be destroyed in the Second Death. The test which God will apply will be so searching, so thorough, that although his creatures will still be free moral agents, he is able to guarantee that thenceforth "there shall be no more sighing, no more crying, no more dying, because all the former things of sin and death

CERTAIN RESULTS
Many a Bedford Citizen Knows How Sure They Are.
Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Bedford. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

Mrs. William Trout, 202 Spring Street, Bedford, Pa., says: "It would be almost impossible to fully describe how intensely I suffered from kidney trouble. I had nearly all the annoyances that accompany a bad case of this disease. My back was extremely painful and I often had dizzy spells, during which spots appeared before my eyes. Finally my ankles and limbs became swollen and my condition caused me much alarm. When my son procured a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills for me at John R. Dull's Drug Store, I began their use and they did me more good than all the other medicines I had taken, put together. I give Doan's Kidney Pills the credit for restoring me to good health." (Statement given October 14, 1907.)

Re-Endorsement
Mrs. Trout was interviewed on November 13, 1909, and she said: "It gives me pleasure to again recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. I have taken them occasionally during the past two years with good results and they have also been used by other members of the family with success." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. To the Editor of The Gazette.
Sir:—I think the tax collectors of the township should be required to file their bonds at April court. By a late law they are to collect the road taxes as well as the school taxes. The road taxes have to be paid in the month of May in order to get the five per cent. reduction, and if the collectors have not filed their bonds there might be some doubt as to whether they have the right to receive the taxes. This is a matter the supervisors ought to give some attention to. Once upon a time some serious complications arose from the fact that a Board of School Directors had neglected to require the collector to file a bond. Yours truly,
Tax Payer.
